to be crowned with success, and the Government now in office was then formed, and took the place of the retiring Administration.

So much time had been lost in these changes of Government, that on the 24th March before Sir Patrick Jennings and his colleagues met Parliament, and then the Premier announced that the Government intended to bring forward, as measures of an urgent and pressing nature, a bill to amend the Civil Service Act, and a bill for the amendment of the Land Act; and also a Local Government Bill, a Public Health Bill, and a bill to amend the Education Act, and others of equally important nature. Later on in his financial statement he informed Parliament of his intention to propose a certain taxation scheme, and in pursuance of that statement he at different times brought in the Stamp Duties Act Amendment Bill, a Customs Duties Bill, a Land Tax Bill, and an Income Tax Bill. With regard to the taxation scheme, Sir W. B. Fisher said that it need only be mentioned here, but in an consideration that the measures which have led to this determined hostility shown to the Customs Duties Bill, it is right to remember that the fiscal policy, as so before the constituencies by the Premier at the meeting of the members of his Government, was to reduce the taxation of the Empire. Parliament, when the financial statement was made, was, in a very important particular, not the same as is represented by this bill. The work of the present session will be best seen in the appended statement, which gives the names of all the public and private bills that have come before Parliament, and the stage to which they have been brought. This statement shows that 66 public bills have been introduced, and of these 15 have been passed. The private bills number 4, and of these 27 have been passed. programme to meet before Parliament when the session is already entering upon its second year!

The time has come when members should seriously reflect upon the waste of time of which they have been guilty. There has been no occasion for it, and it admits of no excuse whatever. It is a gross and intolerable nuisance—a wrong upon the country, and a betrayal of its interests. If the Assembly wishes to regain the favour which it has lost with the country, if it has any desire to make amends for its misdeeds in the past, if the sense of shame is not altogether dead amongst its members, it will reform itself altogether, and begin the work of reformation this very day.

Our special commissioner, whose papers on what he terms the Great Central Scrub are concluded in to-day's issue, brings before Parliament and the country a matter of no small interest. The danger with which he deals is not a new one, and its existence has been known for some time.

finished within the year, and has not been finished yet: the Appropriation Bill, the Unfortunately its growth has been more rapid than was expected, and its magnitude has been inadequately appreciated. We remember that some years ago the attention of the Government of the day was directed to it with much urgency by Mr. THOMAS GARRETT, but the urgency was not sufficiently recognised. If we mistake not, this occurred a considerable time before the passing of the new land law. But, as we pointed out the other day, objections are always raised to what is called piecemeal legislation, and thus evils which are small at the beginning are allowed to develop into large ones before a comprehensive measure can be passed; and at last, when the comprehensive measure comes before the Legislature, the special question does not receive the special attention which its merits justify.

finished yet; the Appropriation Bill, that should have been passed before the close of 1885.

It may be doubted whether even those who first directed the notice of Parliament to the spread of the pine scrub imagined that the evil would extend so rapidly as it has done. According to our commissioner, the tract of country, all of which is partly covered, and one-half of which is thickly covered, by scrub growth, now extends over a distance of two hundred and fifty miles, with a mean width of about one hundred and thirty, and a maximum of two hundred. It is large enough to constitute a small kingdom in the old world. The danger arising from this spread of scrub is twofold: first, it destroys the grass, and renders profitable pastoral occupation impossible; and, next, it provides a harbour, the occupation of which by the rabbits would give them an impregnable position, perpetuate their existence, and indefinitely increase the difficulty and cost of protecting the surrounding country. When it is pointed out that in some districts as many as 59 and 66 young pine plants have been found growing on one square foot of land, it is easy to see that when once the scrub has been allowed to take possession of the country pastoral occupation is useless. The question for the Government to consider is whether it can afford to sacrifice so much of our territory, and to let it pass over as an impregnable fastness into the possession of our enemies. As it seems to us, the Government ought to find or make time for dealing with this particular question this session, even at the risk of being charged with thing of the future. To all intents and purposes, the Parliamentary proceedings of to introducing piecemeal legislation. The misfortune is that no branch of the land question has a fair chance of being considered purely upon its merits. The class conflicts that were wrought into existence by the law of 1881 have rendered it almost impossible even now in 1886 to touch the land question without arousing suspicion, and bringing class interests and class feeling into play. In 1884, when the question of scrub leases was dealt with, it was not merely a want of more accurate knowledge that stood in the way of a satisfactory treatment of the question, there was a fear lest the pastoral leasees should be enabled to work the new system to their own undue advantage and the detriment of the public interest. This was really considered a greater danger than day are the continuation of those of a year ago. We have had a fresh Parliament, and any danger to be dreaded from the spread of the scrub. It would be rash to affirm that the political atmosphere has been purged of the element of suspicion now. It may rather be assumed that any measure introduced now to dispose of this difficulty effectually would be in danger of being challenged on the ground that it extended too much favour to the pastoral interest. What is wanted is to see that the public interest and that of the pastoral tenants in this matter are identical. It is to the interest of both that this land should be rescued from invasion, and be made fit once more for profitable occupation, before the rabbits can take possession of it; and to secure this work of clearance should be made the subject of some certain and definite arrangement, under nominally a fresh session; but the change is in name only. The session of to-day is vi-which it would be accomplished with reasonable certainty, either by the lessees or by the State.

Under the present law the problem is greatly increased in difficulty by the division of the runs. There is the leasehold area to be cleared or kept clear, and there is the resumed area; and it is not to be expected that much will be done on resumed areas held under yearly licenses and open to free selection. One reason why pastoral lessees did not fight the scrub vigorously before the Act of 1884 is said to have been their unwillingness to face the expenditure with their insecure tenure; but their hold upon the resumed areas is even less secure than before. Whatever arrangement, therefore, may be made for the destruction of the scrub, it must be made so that the lessees of scrub on the leasehold areas" of lessees, some strong and special action must be taken by the State to preserve and relieve the resumed areas from invasion. But while the new law has introduced this element of perplexity into the problem, the local administration brought in by the law ought to facilitate the solution of it. If experience has shown anything, it has proved the inadequacy of hard and fast rules to dispose of difficulties of this sort. The law and the regulations should be such as to admit of a certain amount of elasticity in their application, and that principle can best be carried out under an effective system of local administration.

Our political history for the last twelve months is as complex as it is unsatisfactory.

action of some kind should be taken, but to resort to it would be practically to insert new conditions in the leases during their currency, and that is not a sound practice for Parliament to follow, even if it have the power. The only way to get the compulsory element in is to offer the leasees

ALBURY, MONDAY.

Rain commenced last night, and showers have been falling at intervals ever since. The temperature is unusually high, and the barometer exceptionally low, it being down to 29.3 this evening.

BATHURST, MONDAY.

At the rifle trials on Saturday, in the match between mixed teams of volunteers and civilians, the Hon. W. H. Sutor won the first prize among the civilians, and Mr. Biddiph the second prize. Among the volunteers the winners were Private Wiburd, the local champion bicyclist, and Private Cubitt.

The Bathurst cricketers are preparing for the coming season. The turf on the cricket-ground is being laid down, with the object of having good wickets early in the season. An effort will be made to arrange matches between several prominent clubs, and it is probable that steps will be taken to invite the English team to play here.

On Saturday what might have proved a serious fire was prevented, at the new gold works, by the prompt action of two or three young ladies. They were viewing the buildings, and observing smoke at the workshop, they promptly sounded the alarm.

An effort was made to extinguish the flames, but, unfortunately, the shop contained a large collection of inflammable tools, and the suppression of fire saved valuable property.

At the Hospital Committee meeting to-day, on the motion of Deau Marriott, the following resolution was passed:—“That this committee hereby places on record its sense of the great loss the institution has sustained by the death of the late president (Mr. T. Cousins), and, faithfully and efficiently promoted the best interests of the hospital from his initiation. This committee also desires to express its sincerest sympathy with Mrs. Cousins and family in their bereavement.” Several members referred in terms of respect to the memory of the deceased and to the valuable services he had rendered to the hospital. During the proceedings the management of the benevolent auxiliary was incidentally dropped up. It was stated that old and infirm patients had great difficulty to go there. The Hon. W. H.

A man named Smart, employed as a groom at Thomas Gillespie Hotel, died from suffocation to-day whilst at dinner. A post mortem examination was made by Dr Mitchell, who found that a large piece of meat had become impacted in the man's throat, causing death.

NEWCASTLE, MONDAY.

The wreck of the schooner Mary Pashly, which was recently captured in a collision with the tugboat, the Gamgee, is reported to be dangerous to navigation. Yesterday afternoon the steaming Challenge, Captain Boyce, was cruising in the vicinity of Morwerthe. A large spar was observed floating, and the vessel bore up in the direction of it. It was then seen that it was a portion of the mizzenmast of the Mary Pashly, and 25 feet in length, and the vessel was hauled, and was made fast to the bowsprit. The vessel was hauled to the northward by the Challenge, which was held to the mast by portion of a sail, was dragged up, and brought to Newcastle by the Challenge. Captain Boyce states that the sunken vessel is only lying in about seven fathoms of water. If this is the case the sooner the authorities have the vessel removed in some way or other, the better, and the sooner the light is in the way of navigation, and is exceedingly dangerous to vessels passing. It is rumored that the vessel is lying on a rock.

At the Police Court this morning, John Curpene, Spentard, was charged with assaulting W. Johnson on board the steamer Blueplains, with intent to inflict personal bodily harm. The prisoner was committed for trial.

PAIKER, MONDAY.

Nice rain fell on Saturday and Sunday nights, registering 26 points. The weather is beautifully fine now.

TARKEE, MONDAY.

The Right Rev. Dr. Pearson, of the Seaside, arrived here on Saturday evening. On Sunday morning he held a confirmation service in St. John's Church and over sixty candidates were confirmed: he also officiated at the funeral of the late Mrs. J. W. Pearson, and many persons could not gain admittance. During the Bishop's stay he holds confirmation services at Winton, and at the residence of the late Mrs. Pearson, at the church, which has just been completed.

Mr. Burveyor Riddle is busily engaged in the work of aligning the streets of Tarkei.

A case of typhoid fever has broken out at Lardowne.

The weather is fine, with warm days and cool nights.

WAGGA WAGGA, MONDAY.

It rained heavily last night, and 59 points fell up to a.m. The rain continues.

WALGATEE, MONDAY.

A public meeting was held to-day at Isaacs' Hotel, and was largely attended; by invitation, the Mayor, Mr. W. W. take steps to urge the Minister for Lands to have the Narrabri-Walgate railway included in the proposals of the present session. The matter was fully discussed, and a strong committee was appointed to write to the Minister by telegraph, urging him to accede to their request. A number of the mayors of the northern towns have been communicated with, and they are all in favor of the project.

The weather is murky, and little rain. The count everywhere looks like a wheat field. The rivers are very low.

WENTWORTH, MONDAY.

Sergeant Kelly and two troopers have returned from Port Station, and report that there is a strike among the sailors, and that the steamer will be delayed. The steamer is satisfied, and are getting ready to start. The steamer is receiving 25s., but they demand 30s. per week. A similar strike is imminent at Avoca. Everything is quiet so far and there have been no disturbances. The stations were hands badly, and will pay at full price.

The weather is dull, and rain is threatening. Report from the river state that west is splendid, the grass being at foot high.

WEST MAITLAND, MONDAY.
